

TYPES OF Decisions

INDIVIDUAL DECISION

- Individual decision-making involves one person making choices and taking responsibility for the outcome.
- It is efficient for personal decisions and in situations where quick responses are required.

GROUP DECISION

- Group decision-making involves a team or committee of individuals working collaboratively to reach a decision.
- It can lead to diverse perspectives and better outcomes but may be time-consuming.

INTUITIVE DECISION

- Intuitive decision-making relies on gut feelings, past experiences, and personal judgment.
- It can be quick but may involve subjective factors and higher risks.

RATIONAL DECISION

- (Rational decision-making is based on a systematic and logical assessment of options, involving careful analysis and evaluation.
- It minimizes biases, and focuses on the facts..

AUTOCRATIC DECISION

- Autocratic decision-making occurs when a single individual makes choices without consulting others.
- It is efficient but may lead to reduced employee engagement and team morale.

DEMOCRATIC DECISION

- (Democratic decision-making involves group consensus, where everyone's opinions are considered.
- It fosters teamwork and engagement but can be time-consuming.

Notes:

Notes:

